

Trump Regime and Narendra Modi Era: An Analytical Study

Dr. Surendra Singh*

Abstract

It has a number of pivotal foreign policy goals that the Donald Trump administration can pursue using the power of strategic collaboration between the United States and India. Synergy between the Indian and American security goals and policies and the similarity of parallel operations of the America First and India First economic policies could prove to be beneficial to both countries. President Trump and Prime Minister Narendra Modi would probably find a compromise due to their firm nationalist and pro business opinions. Both leaders also leverage on the aspect of deal making to the point that they do not always reflect the interest of their respective parties. The current positivism between the United States and India in the Trump Administration, and by bipartisan support in the congress in foreign policy to the U.S. and India relations creates the sense of the urgent need to capitalize on the opening. This essay recommends that the Trump administration should consider taking prompt measures on a number of fronts to enjoy the fruits of greater collaboration with India. First, negotiate with the Prime Minister Modi to establish a shared strategic vision of the United States and India relationship particularly with regard to shared interests in China, Pakistan, and Afghanistan. Second, give India top diplomatic and strategic importance. Third, prove that America is propagating the growing influence of India in Asia. Fourth, forge new vistas of defence and security relationships between India and the United States. Fifth, pursue ways of involving the strengthening of friendships and the capacity of managing the economic relations more affirmatively more when the issue of trade and immigration are involved .

Keywords: India, Mutual Relations, US, Friendship, Security Cooperation, Immigration Issues.

Introduction:

India is becoming one of the major countries in the world. One of the three major

*Associate Professor, Department of Political Science, Atma Ram Sanatan Dharma College, (University of Delhi) , Dhaula kuan, new Delhi-21